You can search by any criteria, such as SIC, NAICS, Company Type, Geographic area, etc.

To further narrow down a search, within the “Business Description” drop-down menu, and add additional criteria. For example, if you’re searching under a SIC code for the marketing industry, add “consult*” in the business description search box to further narrow the field to consulting firms that offer marketing, or vice versa.

Area codes can also be a great way to search in the GTA, using 416 or 647. Once you use 905 for the surrounding areas, however, keep in mind that the result could be anywhere from St.Catharines to Ajax. If you want a tighter search than area code or city, try postal codes. Postal codes for specific buildings or streets can be found on Canada Post’s website at www.canadapost.ca (direct link for postal code look up at time of writing:

For executive searches, lists can also be created. You can search by name or company.

Please note that LexisNexis appears to heavily rely on LinkedIn and internet data for executive information. Key players may be missing from the database simply because they have a protected or limited internet presence.

You may also get a large number of results for common names, as well as find listings for the executive you're looking for, but for their work on the boards of other companies.

By choosing "Company" in the side drop-down menu under Result Groups, you can further narrow your search. You can also limit by subject, language or publication name.
